

NEW YORK POST

October 24, 2007

Penn on track

State officials yesterday took the first steps toward converting the old Farley Post Office into Moynihan Station, complete with a new Madison Square Garden and Penn Station commuter hub.

Yesterday's release of a "scoping document" — which sets out the framework of the proposed development — is the first action on a long-sought Moynihan Station since the state's Public Authorities Control Board nixed an earlier, $900 million plan to create a new train station at the post-office building. Tom Tepousis